The Grand Prix of Slovakia has been a permanent fixture on the Slovak motorsport calendar for many years. It has been held continuously at SLOVAKIA RING since 2010 and traditionally marks the end of the summer holiday period. Visitors can enjoy not only the atmosphere of hot summer days, but above all plenty of speed, excitement, on-track battles and entertainment.

This year, the program will be packed from morning until evening. Fans of different categories of racing cars will have plenty to enjoy, with drivers and teams competing for points in the FIA Central European Zone Trophy (FIA CEZ), TCR Eastern Europe, GT Cup Series, as well as various cup championships.

Familiar Slovak names will also be on the starting grid. Fans can look forward to Miro Konôpka and his sons Adam and Matej, Viktor Mráz, and young Christopher Stephan Oslanec. Drivers competing under the wings of Matej Homola will also be represented. Matej Homola himself will not race due to health issues, but he will meet fans during an autograph session over the weekend.

Within FIA CEZ, the main attractions will be cars from Division D4, including the GT class, featuring GT3 cars, as well as TCR touring cars and D5 prototypes. The race weekend will begin on Friday with free practice. Saturday will feature qualifying followed by the first 25-minute sprint race. The second race will take place on Sunday morning, with a rolling start.

FIA CEZ Division D2 consists mostly of Formula Renault 2.0 single-seaters. Their races will also take place on both Saturday and Sunday.

A special class will feature touring cars with engine capacities of up to two litres (TC-2.0). Their races are scheduled for Saturday and Sunday as well.

The traditional one-hour endurance race with driver changes will once again take place on Saturday evening. The same D4 classes that compete in the sprint races will start side by side. A spectacular audio-visual experience is guaranteed.

GT CUP SERIES

The Most Powerful Machines Return to Slovakia Ring

GT CUP SERIES is one of the most important circuit racing series in Central and Eastern Europe and holds official FIA International Series status within FIA CEZ. Its grids bring together professional drivers, experienced teams and ambitious amateurs, while the diverse field features GT3, GT4, GTC, GTX and D5 prototype cars. Spectators can therefore see cars such as Lamborghini, Ferrari, Mercedes-AMG, KTM, Porsche, as well as Ligier prototypes.

The 2026 season began in April at Austria's Red Bull Ring, where dramatic battles took place in both the sprint and endurance races. The first sprint was won by local driver Marius Aigner in a KTM X-BOW, while the second race was won by Slovak driver Miro Konôpka in the ARC Bratislava team's Ligier JS 320 LMP3 prototype. Ondřej Rokos was also very quick in a Mercedes-AMG GT2, finishing third twice while dominating the GTX category.

Konôpka is also one of the series' leading Slovak drivers. At the Red Bull Ring, he scored the maximum 50 points in the D5 category, winning both the sprint and endurance races. He therefore leads the D5 endurance standings after the opening event, ahead of Thomas Ambiel, Václav Janík and Petr Koukola. In GTX, Marius Aigner led after the first round, ahead of Ondřej Rokos and Petr Lisa.

The series was originally scheduled to continue at Croatia's Grobnik, but the event was cancelled due to adverse weather conditions. GT CUP SERIES subsequently held a three-hour endurance race at Slovakia Ring and, following its summer event at Most, now returns to the Slovak circuit.

The program will feature two 25-minute sprint races and a one-hour endurance race.

For Slovak fans, the biggest attraction will undoubtedly be Miro Konôpka and his Ligier LMP3 prototype. The grid will also feature spectacular GT cars, making GT CUP SERIES one of the most exciting categories of the entire weekend. The series will then continue with events in Brno and the season finale at the Hungaroring.

TCR EASTERN EUROPE

TCR touring car series are among the most exciting categories in circuit racing, and TCR Eastern Europe is their regional counterpart for Central and Eastern Europe.

After three events this season, Czech driver Martin Kadlečík of Aditis Racing leads the championship with 160 points. His biggest rival is reigning champion Adam Kout of Janík Motorsport, who has 132 points. Third place belongs to Kout's teammate Jiří Zbožínek, with 95 points.

The battle between Kadlečík and Kout will be one of the main attractions of the upcoming event. Kout has already demonstrated his speed this season, scoring two victories at the Salzburgring, while Kadlečík has maintained consistent form and dominated both opening races at Croatia's Grobnik.

With a length of 5,922 metres and 14 corners, the Slovak circuit is the longest track on the current championship calendar. It will host the penultimate round of the season, meaning the battle for the title could become particularly intense.

Clio Cup Bohemia is one of the most entertaining forms of racing for both drivers and spectators. A packed field of identical, highly prepared cars promises battles for every corner, with three or even five cars running side by side and others close behind their bumpers. Their races are scheduled for Saturday and Sunday. The FIA Swift Cup Europe and FIA CEZ Twingo Cup will be equally entertaining.

The DN4 Maluch Trophy, featuring legendary Fiat 126p cars, as well as the BMW 3 Series Cup and BMW 325 Series Cup, are also based on the principle of closely matched machinery. The aim is to create competitive and dramatic racing in which the driver plays a major role in determining the result. These championships are well known for their close battles.
